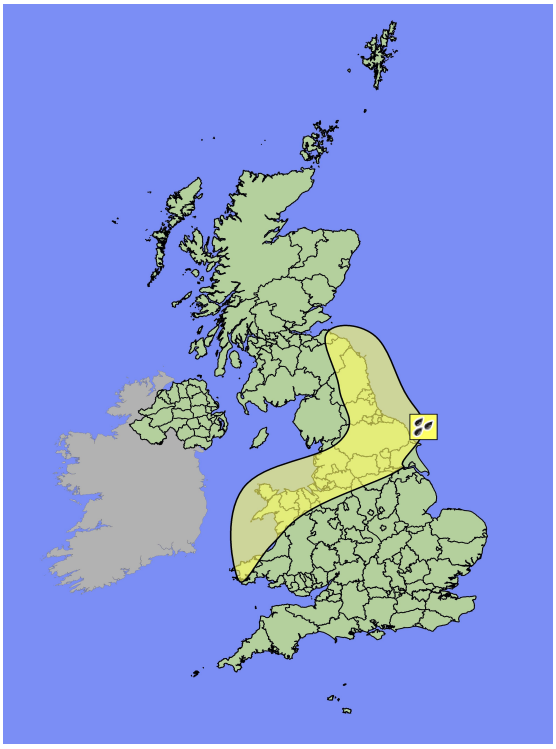
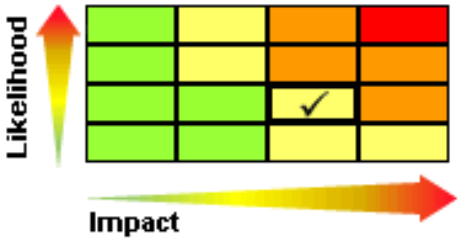
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A frontal system will remain slow-moving across the area. Whilst the associated rainfall is not expected to be particularly heavy, persistence will allow accumulations to build up. 10-20 mm is expected widely but around 30-40 mm in places. Given the saturated nature of the ground, some localised flooding is likely.

This warning updates the previous issue, with some adjustments to the areas affected, notably a northward shift of the southern boundary, such that Shropshire, Staffordshire, Nottinghamshire and Lincolnshire are no longer included in the areas affected by further heavy rainfall.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 11:00 on Mon, 26th Nov 2012 until 23:59 on Mon, 26th Nov 2012

Persistent, occasionally heavy, rain is expected to affect the area during Monday.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised flooding.
